The Maneuvers.

General Grant, commanding the Blue army, yesterday took up a strong position behind Bull Run. The advance along the Wellington pike was harassed just west of Pageland Lane by the First Brigade of General Grant's army, under General Wint. General Bell opposed this force with his First Brigade under General Lee.

Taking this as his adversary's centre, he threw the brigades of Barry, Regan and Smith to the right of Lee, seemingly in an effort to get around what would be the original left wing of the Blue

When nightfall came this had not been ecomplished, owing to the distance the s rear guard, or Wint's brigade.

General Grant selected the position be-hind Bull Run in which to defend Washington in order that it might be as easy as possible for his reinforcements, which are on the way to join him.

His position was not what General Bell evidently bad calculated on in ordering his turning movement, so the situation to be developed today is one of interest. For this reason General Bell's army yesterday evening was fully two miles from the main position of his adversary, and his advance was being opposed by single brigade.

The fighting between the first two brigades of each army yesterday resulted in forcing the Blue brigade back through a strip of woods it had occupied just south of the Wellington pike and west of Pageland lane.
